Updating Western Monarch Population Goals & Objectives

Emma Pelton

emma.pelton@xerces.org

The Xerces Society for Invertebrate Conservation

Emma leads Xerces' western monarch butterfly conservation work with a focus on land management, applied research, community science, and policy. Emma and her team work extensively with land managers and community scientists in coastal California to protect, monitor, and adaptively manage for overwintering monarchs. They also work with people across the West to advance monarch conservation.
